CLEVELAND, FRIDAY MORNING, MARCH 24, 1865.

DAILY LEADER

The Battle of Waynesboro The correspondent of the New York Times gives the following description of

THE BATTLE OF WAYNESHORO. It was, I think, between one and two clock in the afternoon when the advance d the command arrived near Waynes-soro. General Custer, riding along in front of the enemy's line with his staff, inspected it carefully, and then, in his energetic way, remarked. "I think we can flank them on the (enemy's) left." To many present it seemed as though to offer battle under the circumstances was madness. Not so with the ruling spirit there. Promptly his orders were given, and they were obeyed with unaccountable alsority. The second brig-ade, being nearest at hand, Wells, its com-mander, was directed to put a heavy skirmish line of mounted men. In obedience to this order, the twenty-second New York, Colcuel Thompson, and first New Hamp-shire, Captain Wyatt, were deployed and thrown forward, in a depression of the earth, to within about one thousand yards of the enemy's position; the line was or-dered to be made heavy to deceive the enemy, to make them believe the main attack was to be from the front. On the response, "It must be done, shell or no shell." The first Vermont, Lieutenor no shell." The first Vermont, Lieutenant Colonel Hall, was next directed to take a position on the left and rear, with orders at a given signal to make a dash to gain a piece of woods opposite the enemy's right, to convey the impression that that portion of their line was in danger. The eighth New York, Major Compson, was placed in reserve to support the skirmish line on the left of the pike. Only one squadron of the remaining regiment in this brigade—fif-teenth New York, Colonal Coppinger—be-ing present, that was also placed in reserve. The balance of the regiment was on duty at the rear of the whole column.

THE FLANKING COLUMN.

Pennington's brigade, the First, next came up. Lieutenant Colonel Whitaker, Acting Inspector General, was directed to have three regiments of this command disounted and guide them through the woods and a ravine, so as to be out of sight of the enemy, to a position on the enemy's extreme left; for fear the enemy night discover this body of men in ses son to make preparations to meet it, the mounted skirmish line was extended to the right so as to cover the front of the column when in position. Colonel Pennington detached in this important flank duty the cond Ohio, Lieutenant Colonel A. B. Nettleton; Third New Jersey, Lieutenant afterward negroes and white troops gave us the information that Gen. Early with about clonel Robbson; First Connecticut, Major Goodwin—the men were all armed with Spencer's carbines. The command reached 250 men, was less than an hour's ride i front. Lieutenant Colonel Whittaker, wit its position without the enemy discovering the movement. The Second New York, detachments from the First Connecticu and Second Ohio, were started in pursu Colonel A. The Third brigade commanded by Colocoming in, and at the end of about four miles, Colonel Whittaker was within a nel Cadehart, now came up. The First New York, (Lincoln) Lieutenant Colonel J. C. few rods of General Early. The enemy being closely pressed, scattered in ever Batteraby, was placed on the pike. The Second Virginia, Lieutenant Colonel Wm. direction. Captain Benton, of the bes Virginia, Major Howe, and the Third Virginia, Major Witcher, were placed to the left and rear as reserve. All the troops except the skirmish line and the flanking party on the right, were in column of one turned and asked a companion "Shall I shoot him, General?" party on the right, were in column of fours ready to charge or be thrown to any "No," responded the General (Early), "Do not take life unnecessarily." Just at this part where their services might be needed. Woodruff's artillery (two guns) was just moment some of our cavalry came within placed to the right of the pike at a dis-tance of 1,000 yards from the enemy's hearing, and the enemy fled, leaving Bur ton confined under the horse, where he re works; to deceive the enemy, the guns were wheeled about and taken to the rear mained until relieved by some of his own position again, but so under a rise of ground as not to be seen by the enemy. The enemy cheared when they saw the artillery was withdrawn. The position of the several commands was veri-fied and the commanders carefully instructed what to do. While all this was going on, the skirmish line kept up a slow fire which was responded to by the enemy by and everything was in motion at once, ev-ery order was carried out to the letter, and the result was success. The enemy were not a little surprised to see so formidable a body of flankers on their left; an attempt o form a line to meet them proved abou tive; on they pressed and the enemy see-ing Custer's reckless fellows marching in upon them from every direction, became anic stricken, broke and ran in terrible confusion, abandoning muskets, flags and artillery. By the time they had got fair-ly into the village of Waynesburo, a few rods to the rear of their works, the mounted cavalry had charged in upon them, and Yankees and rebels were all mixed up to-gether. The first Vermont moved in by preventing a general staughter. South River winds its way along just to the rear of Waynesboro, and the only route for the enemy to escape was to cross this. It was not at this time fordable, and the only way for infantry to cross was by a small foot-bridge and by the railroad bridge.

A few hundred attempted to escape by the latter route. Colonel Whitaker, (who with Captain Burroughs and some thirty men of the Eighth New York, were the first to cross the stream,) with a few men on horseback, cut off the men attempting to escape on the railroad track. Whitaker with a dozen men here captured at least 300 hun-dred rebels and the battle-flag. Major Compeon, Captain Burroughs and Captain

Benton, the latter of the 22d New York

Before reaching Mound Squirrel Bridge Early and his entire party had dispersed to the woods, going in different directions, but still closely pursued by our men. Most of the fugitives forded the South Anna at a place in other times deemed impracticable; but liberty is sweet, and the only hope of escape was by crossing this stream. On ward the different detachments sped. Our men were within a few hundred yards, when Early and a few of his comp shot and shell. Everything being in read-iness General Custer's bugier sounded the crossed the river. Captain Hazlett, of the 1st Vermont Cavalry, was in the advance advance, when each command sounded the "charge." The First Vermont dashed Early's party across the river was again divided and dispersed, Early this time on for the left, threstening the enemy's right; ly taking an orderly with him into the woods. This re-division of his company the formidable skirmish line moved up in the formidable skirmish line moved up in full view of the enemy and pressed forward just as Pennington, Nettleton and Whitaker, with the Second Ohio in advance—regimental part with the First Connecticut and Third New-Jersey close behind—amerged from a piece of woods upon the enemy's extreme left. Woodruff commerced throwing shell from his two guns saved him from capture.

The direction pursued by one squad led to the capture of two of our own scouts on a secret expedition; another party overtook Early's Adjutant General, a man named Moore, whom they captured. Several other straggling members of the party were picked up, but Early, favored by the dark-ness of the night, escaped.

The Flood in Bochester Predicted in The Rochester Union says:

This calamity—the greatest point of pe-uniary loss that ever befel our city—had been foretold Thirty years ago the promenced. Buildings were then, and have river bed, and walls of stone were laid up on either side, and man presumed to say t the Genesees, "Thus far shalt thou come and no farther." The waters, curbed for s time, have more than once threatened to burst the bands that held them, but not til gether. The first Vermont moved in from the left, the Kighth New-York on the pike, and Capehart with the whole of his brigade at his heels, dashed into the village, following the Kighth. The sons of the Ancient Dominion showed no fight at close quarters, but surrendered promptly when ordered to do so, therethe morning of the ever to be remembered 18th of March, 1855, did they show to the power that so long held them how power-less indeed it was when the waters came in their majesty to assert their right. One of our venerable pioneers who had watched the flow of the river for nearly half a cen tury remarked on Saturday, "The Genesce has now asserted its rights!" This calem-ity was foretold June 20th, 1850, by Lyman B. Langworthy, Esq., then Supervisor.
On that day the corner stone of the new Court House was laid, Mr. L. made a memorandum of his prediction that the Gensees, in consequence of the encroachment upon its right of way to the Lake, would at some time inundate the central and lower portions of the city—and he depos-ited the paper in the box that now lies
